

Breeding boxes

The breeding boxes are practical 3-in-1 containers for breeding, rearing and temporarily separating fish and invertebrates inside the main aquarium. The fry protection system, internal dividers and the option to connect aeration make it easier to care for selected aquarium inhabitants.

The range includes three sizes: S, M and L.

- 3-in-1 use – the containers can be used for breeding, rearing or temporary isolation of selected fish or invertebrates
- Fry protection system and horizontal internal divider – help separate young fish from adults and temporarily isolate selected individuals
- Upper chamber can be divided into 2 sections – the upper section includes a removable vertical divider, allowing two females to be housed separately
- Fitted lid – with convenient openings that support gas exchange
- Stable placement in the aquarium – suction-cup mounting provides stability and lets you choose a convenient position
- Transparent walls – make it easier to observe the animals during care and feeding without removing them from the box
- Air pump connection option – a separate air pump supports water circulation and oxygenation inside the breeding box
- Three sizes to choose from – allow the breeding box size to be matched to the available space and intended use
- Movable, removable dividers – allow the container to be converted into a larger nursery for young fish or an isolation box for temporarily separating a fish

The divider in the upper section creates 2 separate compartments for females

Horizontal divider with openings allowing fry to pass into the lower chamber

Aeration can be connected in 2 positions

The spray bar supports water circulation and oxygenation

Stable mounting on the aquarium wall

Channels allow water to circulate through the container
